Old Virginia's orange-and-blue-hosed gladiators have fought another battle on the gridiron with their North Carolina adversaries, and one more victory perches upon their banner.

No fortunate fluke, no chance opening, can dim the glory of the proud victors nor soothe the pain of the noble vanquished.

The score was: Virginia, 12; North Carolina, 6.

From a playing standpoint the game was not sensational. Spectacular features were few and far between. Still it was a game well worth watching, being fierce, hard, and clean. It was played yesterday afternoon on the chalk-red turf of West-End Park in the presence of about 4,000 spectators.

The city became foot-ball wild on Wednesday night, and every hour yesterday added to the enthusiasm and the crowds. For some days past the larger store windows have been decorated with the orange and dark blue of Virginia, and the light blue and white of North Carolina, but as the day for the contest drew near the window-dressers undid their work, and prepared the most elaborate decorations ever seen here in connection with the intercollegiate foot-ball match.

THE WEATHER UNFAVORABLE.
 After a night passed with visions of the goddess of foot-ball victory draped in orange and blue, or in blue and white, Virginia men and North Carolina men awoke early yesterday morning to find the day's dawning full of the most discouraging indications. What a saucy, rabid, mischief-making wind it was that came to lash the day of one of the greatest athletic events that have ever taken place in Richmond! It swept across from the blue and chilly-looking northside. It ruffled the waters of the James and swept up the dust on the streets, and sent it hurtling into the eyes and over the clothing of great and little with democratic impartiality. As the hour for the calling of the game approached, however, the weather, which had been so inauspicious during the early morning hours, showed signs of improvement, and with the coming of the vast throngs of people, the disagreeable features of the day abated. The cold north wind died down to an extent which caused it to be almost no factor in the contest.

The gray, low hanging clouds that threatened each moment to weep, indeed lent an effective background to the picture of the afternoon, and no man, whether a Virginia or North Carolina sympathizer, who looked upon it, but must have felt his blood quicken in his veins and his heart beat stronger for having seen it.

THE SCENE AT THE PARK.
 The first thing that struck the eyes of those who went out early to the scene of the contest was a vast array of yellow pine and a horde of variegated fakers. It looked as if several circuses had come together. There was a din of many voices. The peanut and candy vendors, and the sellers of innumerable and agonizing forms of badges and souvenirs, and other tortures, were vociferous with invitations, trying to earn an honest penny by catering to the people's wants, real or imaginary.

The crowd was a little slow in coming. What high prices had begun the threatening weather finished with many thousands. They stayed away. The multitude that did attend the game was handily admirably by the Richmond Railway and Electric Company. From 11 o'clock there were processions of sputtering, spark-spitting trolleys on the streets leading to the grounds. Many walked, and the foot-ball girls who went to the game on foot found a wonderful cosiness in the fresh, eager air. The grandstand filled up fairly well. The western bleachers were fully occupied, except in the lower section and in the north stand, all the seats were claimed. The carriage enclosure was also well filled.

THE CROWD WELL HANDLED.
 The arrangements for handling the crowd were perfect. Without confusion the people were admitted through the proper channels, and were promptly seated. The crowd was so absorbed in getting comfortably seated that but little enthusiasm was awakened until a short time before the teams appeared.

It was a picturesque scene. The high tiers of seats that framed the field—lined off in straight white boundaries, indicating the fateful limits to which the ball could be kicked or carried—were filled with a host of happy and enthusiastic, but expectant and anxious people. All of them were, of course, ardent admirers of one side or the other, and the colors they displayed readily indicated their sympathies. It was only natural that the orange-and-blue roster should be the most in evidence, but the cohorts of North Carolina were by no means inconspicuous. A noticeable feature was the number of ladies present, and they all displayed their favorite colors, while their escorts, in many instances, showed harmonizing flags and ribbons. As the game progressed ample opportunity was afforded for the adherents of both sides to wave their banners, and to use the lungs.

ENTRANCE OF THE HEROES.
 It was 2:40 o'clock, and the crowd was still surging through the gates in great, shifting waves of color, when suddenly, and to the uninitiated, without provocation, a great convulsion seized the spectators, and they rose from their seats and cheered lustily, as the battle-scarred and bruised warriors of Virginia's University, and then of the University of North Carolina, came bounding into the arena, like bands of ponderous bronies, hurling themselves on the hard, unyielding earth as if it were a fat, old-fashioned feather-bed.

The wild transports of glee with which they impartially punctured the internal economy of their fellow-Brownies in pursuing the nimble pigskin showed plainly, even at that stage of the game, that in whatever other qualities they were deficient, each man was blessed with a pneumatic solar plexus.

FOUGHT FROM THE START.
 There was no Virginia luck in the flip of the coin, and North Carolina chose to defend the east goal.

A 2:57 the two teams lined-up, and Captain Morrison started the ball. It was a terrific contest from the start, and the plucky and stubborn fight that the Tarheels put up, and the smallness of the score, was a genuine surprise to the followers of the orange and blue, who in their sublime confidence had been willing to risk their dollars on the expectation of a score of not less than 20 points. Virginia had a team which outweighed their opponents by 20 pounds, and they came into the field conscious of a proud record behind them. North Carolina, on the other hand, had a team with no remarkable record set down in its season's experience, but it was game, every inch of it, and its supporters pinned their faith, and their dollars, too, to the piece they thought it would set, and to its strength in the mass on the tackle. Virginia's strong point was in tackling. The adherents of North Carolina will tackling. These instructions were rigidly adhered to by the two elevens, and as a result, everything passed off smoothly.

VIRGINIA GETS KICK OFF.
 Carolina won the toss, and, choosing to defend the east goal, gave Virginia the kick off. The men then took up their respective positions, and Morrison kicked off to Carolina's 20-yard line. Collins captured the ball on a neat catch, and a 5-yard run towards Carolina's goal. Hill then took charge of the ball, and went through Carolina's right tackle for 5 yards. He made another attempt at the same thing, and then, on a fumble, the ball went to Carolina on her 15-yard line. Collins took charge of it in the first play, but made a bad fumble, and Carney captured it, going through Carolina's centre for a gain of 5 yards. Hill tried a run through the right end, and made an advance of 3 yards, and in the next play, Morrison was knocked out. He soon got on his feet again, however, and resumed play.

A double pass was attempted at this stage of the game, but resulted in no gain, and Hill then went around the end for 2 yards. Morrison kicked the centre for 2 yards, and the ball went over to Carolina's 7-yard line.

HARD FIGHT FOR GOAL.
 Then the struggle started in earnest. The Carolinians did everything in their power to head the Virginians off, but the boys from Charlottesville were bent on reaching the goal, which was now almost within their grasp, and they redoubled their efforts. Morrison once more attacked Carolina's centre, and again did he gain a yard. Hill then followed through the same opening for a gain of 2 yards, and Carney carried the ball 1 yard further. Desperate work was now being done, and the Carolinians were pushed back inch by inch. They waited for the next onslaught, which came very promptly, and ere they could do ought to check him, Morrison had again attacked their centre and carried the ball over the top. Morrison scored 4 points for Virginia, amid the howls of the crowd, who waved Virginia's colors high in the air, and liberally applauded the doughty captain. Templeman kicked goal in a most skillful manner, and added 2 more points to Virginia's score.

Score: Virginia, Carolina, 6.

HIS KICK NOT TRUE.
 The ball being taken back to the centre, Belden kicked off, but kicking out of bounds, the ball was returned, and he had to repeat the effort. He kicked for 40 yards the next time, and Nalle catching it, returned it 20 yards before he was tackled. Morrison then made a return kick of 30 yards to Belden, who was quickly tackled by Mallory. Kicks being the order of the day, Belden returned Morrison's punt, and kicked 20 yards to Nalle, who was tackled in his tracks. Hill, on a play around the end, made a gain of 8 yards, and Carney followed with a gain of 8 yards, and a half through the centre. The gap in the centre thus made was taken advantage of by Hill, who went through it for a 2-yard gain.

In the scrimmage that followed Collins received a painful injury to his right leg, but after being rubbed down, resumed play. Morrison made a dash through the centre for a gain of a yard and a half, and Carney went around the end for eight yards. Hill attempted to make the same play but failed, and lost 4 yards for Virginia. Carney then went through the centre for 1 yard, and Morrison made another kick, this time yielding the ball 35 yards down the field. Rogers captured it for Carolina, and returned it 5 yards, after which Belden broke through Virginia's centre for a gain of 1 yard. Howell, on a play around the end, made two yards and Carney tried again, and this time secured a gain of 2 yards. Belden made another kick which yielded 35 yards. Hill captured the ball on Virginia's 12-yard line and returned it 5 yards. Nalle then made a fumble, but Carney saved the ball for Virginia, and it being snapped back to Morrison, he kicked it 40 yards into Carolina's territory. Belden caught it and gained 3 yards before being tackled. Howell followed with a 3-yard gain, and then Collins made an effort to pass through Virginia's left tackle, but failed. Belden made a 15-yard kick to Templeman, who returned the ball 3 yards, and Virginia tried a mass play on the left tackle. The ball was fumbled, though, and no gain was made. Carney made a great run of 15 yards around the right end, and being tackled, fell heavily, striking his head against the ground and rendering him unconscious. It was some time before he revived, but he continued to play and figured in the very next play, which yielded Virginia another 15 yards. In this scrimmage Shull was laid out, but he, too, returned in time to line up. Virginia, with Carney to the fore, made a mass play which yielded 15 yards for Virginia, and this ball was lost and White, of Carolina, fell on it.

IS HURT A SECOND TIME.
 Collins took it through left tackle for 2 yards, and was once more laid out with injuries to his leg. Belden, as soon as play could be resumed, kicked off 35 yards, and Hill, who captured the pigskin, returned it 4 yards. Carney then attacked Carolina's tacklers and gained 2 yards. On the play, however, the ball was fumbled, and Carolina got it. Howell started with it, but was neatly tackled by Davis, and instead of a gain, he lost 5 yards. In the mix-up that followed, Hill went around the right end on the next play, though, and gained 2 yards. Belden then made another kick, which yielded Carolina 25 yards, and Hill, who went after the ball for Virginia, fumbled it. This gave Carolina an opportunity, and Rogers captured the ball on Virginia's 30-yard line. Before she could take advantage of this opportunity, however, she was tackled by Mallory, and the ball went back to Virginia. Hill then made a 3-yard kick, and Carney followed with a gain of 8 yards, and a half through the centre. The gap in the centre thus made was taken advantage of by Hill, who went through it for a 2-yard gain.
